Disposition of Constantinople a Problem in the Impending Dismemberment of Turkey.

donia, and Ferdinand and his govern-vored by Sultan Abdul Hamid, and who now find themselves shorn of many of their former advantages, are determi upon a restoration of their old-time independence; and the Armenians are putting forward analogous pretensions and agi-tating in favor of a revival of the former kingdom of Armenia.

On the Island of Samos the people have arisen and killed the Turkish governor general, while from Asia Minor come of Christians by the Moslems, but also the announcement that the latter are dissatisfied with the new order at Constantinople, which they regard as a usurpation of supremacy by the Rayahs, or subject Christian races, and are bent on restoring all the former power of Islam on the shores of the Bosphorus.

It has been impressed upon them that although Abdul Hamid's deposition had been effected by means of a fetvah of the Sheikh-ul-Islam, yet that it was in reality the work of the Christian members of the national legislature, where the bulk of the votes for his dethronement were cast by Armenians, Jews, Greeks, Bulgars, Macedonians, and Servians,

It is they, moreover, who, formed the overwhelming majority of the legislative delegation appointed to announce to Abdul Hamid his downfall, and to notify Rechad of his accession to the sovereignty. That Christians and Jews should have it in their power to deprive a Moslem Sultan of his rulership over a Mohammedan empire on the pretext that he had tampered with the sacred books of Islam has aroused the indignation of the followers of the prophet in all parts of the world, even in Afghanistan and in India, while in Turkey itself it is likely to speedily develop into a general rising of the Mohammedans against the present regime on the shores of the Bosphorus.

With regard to the accusation brought by the Young Turks party against Abdul Hamid of having tampered with the sacred books of Islam, and which was the first and main charge on the strength of which they were able to extort the fetvah from the Sheikh-ul-Islam, declaring that a monarch guilty of such practices was unfit to rule, it relates to his Pan-Islamic dreams and to his pretensions, very generally admitted, to the Caliphate; that is to say, to spiritual supremacy over the entire Moslem world.

The Koran-that is to say, the Khadissel Shereef portion thereof-strictly pro vides that the Caliph must be a lineal descendant of the prophet who founded the faith. Abdul Hamid, it is claimed, fuldiled none of these qualifications, his ancestors having belonged to a tribe distinguished for their enmity to the prophet He cannot be considered as being the remotest degree descended from Mahomet, and the only foundation on which he based his claim to the Caliphate is an alleged, but by no means authentic cession of the dignity to his ancestor, Sultan Selim, the conqueror of Egypt, by the last Fatimite Caliph at Cairo in 1516.
